5. Develop and sustain effective Association leadership	Create an active steering committee	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>-Get volunteers at the advising community meeting at the annual conference</li> <li>-Seek volunteers from the member email list</li> <li>-Have online meetings about every other month</li> </ul>	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>-Have steering committee members from all 10 regions of NACADA</li> <li>-Develop subcommittees or topics for steering committee members to focus</li> </ul>	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>-Dawn Krause for member email</li> <li>-Amy Treboni-previous chair</li> <li>-Amanda Mather-Cluster Rep</li> </ul>	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>-Getting steering committee members from each region</li> <li>-Having an area of focus for each steering committee member</li> </ul>

2. Provide professional development opportunities that are responsive to the needs of advisors and advising administrators	Create a Facebook group for member use to connect with colleagues, ask questions, share ideas, and post blogs	-Create a Facebook group for the Undecided & Exploratory Students Advising Community -Invite members to join -Encourage members to invite others	-See the number of people who have joined the group -Post conversation starters to prompt activity within the group -Track the amount of traffic in the group -Encourage short writings, like blogs, to publish on the Facebook group	-Dawn Krause as the NACADA Executive Office representative -Other NACADA Advising Community groups on Facebook for ideas (Orientation, Advising Administration) -Recommend members join other Facebook groups to encourage interaction among advising communities	-Some members do not use Facebook -Expand to other social media platforms (i.e. Twitter, LinkedIn) -People joining the group but not engaging with others
1. Expand and communicate the scholarship of academic advising	-Increase conference proposals related to undecided & exploratory students -Continue award nominations advising community members and work related to exploratory advising	-Send reminders about deadlines for presentations and award nominations -Highlight people and offices that are doing great work in our area across the world on the Facebook group and through email	-See the number of proposals for our community to review for the annual conference -Review awards for outstanding work related to exploratory advising	-Steering committee to engage proposal readers in the concurrent review process -Steering committee to encourage applications	-A lack of nominations for awards -Too few proposal readers, making for large numbers for few volunteers
