

ACADEMIC ADVISING AND COACHING COMMUNITY

The increase in the academic advising and coaching movement for college student populations nationally at two and four-year institutions, requires interactive strategies for effectively addressing the needs of the whole student. The members of the Academic Advising and Coaching Community are from a variety of institutions. Our diverse membership includes advisors, faculty advisors, advising administrators, student affairs professionals and graduate students all working together to develop the resources to help students produce fulfilling results, improve their performance and the quality of their lives.

Linnette C. White, Indiana University School of Medicine (on the campus of Purdue University-West Lafayette, IN lcwhite@purdue.edu

Current HOT TOPICS in this area and one related article or resource:
Coaching Certifications- Spotlight Series online discussions from 2018:
July 2018 Spotlight Recording
April 2018 Spotlight Recording

Two things you need to know about effective coaching with students:

- The student is the “expert” in his or her own life.
- The student drives the conversation; the advisor provides the guidance and exemplary listening skills.

For more information check out our webpage at:

<https://www.nacada.ksu.edu/Community/Advising-Communities/Academic-Coaching.aspx>

Advising as Coaching Toolkit available for purchase through the NACADA Store $10 (member rate)