

May 2022 Newsletter

Hello NACADA Adult Learners Community,

Welcome to your May newsletter for updates and information!

A Moment to Reflect

What advice would you give to a new academic advisor working with adult students?

Steering Committee Updates

Updates

- The Article Discussion held April 29 on Best Practices in Advising Non-Traditional Students facilitated good conversation among the 46 people in attendance, including the need for updated articles on best practices in post-COVID times. See our next upcoming event below!
- While NACADA did record the previous two events, they are in ongoing discussions about policies and procedures for posting such records. We keep asking for a status update, and we'll get them posted to our Adult Learners AC webpage as soon as we can. Thank you for your patience.

Upcoming Adult Learners Advising Community Events

Next Month

- Friday, June 3rd from 2:30-3:30 pm (Central Time), Writing Discussion: Learn How to Write for NACADA
 - Join us to discuss writing for NACADA's publications—Academic Advising Today, NACADA Review, and the NACADA Journal. We'll talk about potential topics regarding adult learners and possibly connect you with colleagues who would like to collaborate.
 - Register in advance for this meeting:
