Advising Competencies: Development, Implementation and Assessment

Academic advisors fulfill various roles and responsibilities while supporting student success at their institution. Academic advising competencies that utilize your institution’s specific roles and responsibilities, and incorporate NACADA’s new Academic Advising Core Competencies will enhance the overall effectiveness and relevancy of both your training and development program and your evaluation of advisors’ work. This interactive session will introduce attendees to NACADA’s Core Competencies, and get you started on the development, implementation and assessment of academic advisor competencies for your institution.

Learning Outcomes - Participants will:

- Understand the concept of a competency based training and development program.
- Become aware of national and campus resources and tools which may assist in determining desired academic advising competencies.
- Learn the value of developing common academic advisor competencies for those who provide academic advising on your campus.
- Participate in an activity for and group discussion on strategies for developing, implementing and assessing a competency based advising program.

Selected References

