

Conversations, Clarification and Collages: Innovative Workshops for Undecided Students

Smith, Crosier, Atkinson, Florida State University

The Advising First Center for Exploratory Students at Florida State University is committed to creating a community of exploration where students are encouraged to place passion and purpose at the center of their academic decision making. In order to streamline services and promote a consistent message of effective major selection, the Exploratory Advising Team provides interactive programming through a series of workshops and events held regularly throughout the year. These dynamic sessions are instructive, and collaborative, and emphasize the importance of self, major and career discovery. This presentation will include new and creative methods for engaging students in a group advising format. Participants will experience actual workshop activities, exchange ideas with colleagues, and leave the session with resources that can be applied to their own advising practices.
